

PARENTING HISTORY SURVEY

STUART A. GREENBERG, PhD, ABPP, and LEWIS HUMPHREYS, PhD

The Parenting History Survey (PHS) is part of your forensic examination. It is not a test. It is a written interview that asks you to provide basic background information about the parenting of your children, their care-taking, and their previous and current living situations. The PHS is intended to give you an opportunity to answer these questions in private, outside the stress of an interview, at your own pace, and in your own words. There is no need to complete the form in one sitting. Anticipate that while completing the PHS, some people feel as if they are re-experiencing a difficult time in their lives – much as they would if they were discussing the time with another person. Take your time. Feel free to take breaks as you work. Anticipate that this task will take a number of hours. Answering thoroughly and carefully is very important.

You will be asked to provide both facts and opinions to the parenting examiner. Mark any “Not Applicable” questions as “NA”. If the space provided is not sufficient for you to answer a question fully, write in the most important part of your answer and mark that question with a (). Do not attach extra sheets or write in the margins. Remember that this questionnaire is only an attempt to alert the examiner to significant issues – not an attempt to present each issue and concern completely. Also mark with a star () the questions that you feel address the most important issues in the examination. You will have a chance to be more complete and to provide additional documentation to the examiner during your interview. Do your best not to overstate or understate the information that you describe.

The term “other parent” is used throughout the PHS. In most instances, the other parent refers to the children’s other biological parent. The other parent may also be another parent figure or caretaker of the children. If the children have more than one other parent, answer the questions using the term other parent to refer to the person who is contesting you in this matter. If you do not have current information about the other parent, answer the questions about the other parent as best you can based on your previous knowledge of that person. If you or the other parent are not one of the biological parents, some of the questions will not apply to you in the way that they are written. Answer all the questions about yourself. Use the other questions as an opportunity to tell the examiner anything that you think might be helpful in conducting the examination.

Complete the PHS yourself – without assistance from others. Do not discuss it with anyone including your attorney, your family, your counselor or your friends until after you have returned it to this office. You will be asked to certify that you have followed this instruction at the end of the questionnaire. If you cannot remember some factual information that is requested, feel free to look it up. Of necessity, some of the information is personal. Please try to answer as many questions as you can. Do not leave out information simply because it might reflect negatively on you. However, be aware that you do not need to provide information that might be criminally self-incriminating – simply write that you decline to answer.

The office personnel will help you with any part of the questionnaire that you do not understand, but they will not help you with interpreting the psychological importance of a question. The PHS is not a test of spelling, grammar, neatness, or how small you can print. It is important to write legibly in pen (not pencil) or type your answers directly onto the form so they may be photocopied later. Do not have someone else type, transcribe, or edit your answers for you. Printing your answers is fine. Do not attempt to recreate this form on a scanner or word processing program.

The PHS contains about 100 questions, but you will not need to respond, beyond checking “Yes” or “No”, to about half of the questions unless you feel there is a significant concern, allegation or conflict in the area addressed by the question. You may discover that you have already provided information in a previous answer. When that occurs, direct the reader to the previous question. Except when a summary is requested, there is no need to provide the same information more than once. You will find the task much easier if you read the whole questionnaire before beginning. By doing so you may anticipate where to best provide information and how to avoid repeating the same answer.

Your providing the completed PHS in advance will allow the examiner to know a lot more about you from your perspective; your interviews will probably take less time; and your examination is likely to be more thorough. Keep in mind that some of what you write may be used as a basis for the examiner's opinions, report, and testimony. The forensic examiner's job is to perform a thorough, independent, and objective examination and to consider rival hypotheses both from the perspective of the moving party and that of the responding party. The information that you provide in this questionnaire will be very helpful to the examination process. After you have completed the PHS, you may photocopy it for yourself and for your attorney if you wish. Always copy it first if you are mailing the original to the examiner's office. The reproduction of the blank forms is prohibited. Return the original questionnaire to the examiner's office and then call the office to schedule your interviews.
